

HEBEI SPIRIT, Oil Spill, South Korea, 7 December 2007

Korean Coastguard vessel spraying dispersant

Large number of volunteers undertaking manual cleaning of rocks and pebbles in Taeon County

Sorbents were used extensively at almost all the shoreline sites

The military were involved in manual clean-up operations

Contractors used mini-vacs at selected sites

Manual wiping of rocks and pebbles using sorbent materials and other textiles by villagers

Contractors used hot water high pressure treatment at some sites

Clean-up operations have generated large quantities of both liquid and solid oiled waste

Heavy sheen passing over oyster racks in Taean County

Oiled seaweed sampled from a floating laver cultivation farm

Many different oyster rack structures, both licenced and unlicensed, have been oiled

Many fishing boats have been used in clean-up operations